Walk the Freedom Trail® through history!

Experience more than 250 years of history along the Freedom Trail – Boston’s iconic 2.5 mile red line leading to 16 nationally significant historic sites. The Freedom Trail is a unique collection of museums, churches, meeting houses, burying grounds, parks, a ship, and historic markers.

Learn about the people who lived here, their courage, and what they risked striving for victory and freedom. Walk Into History® on the Freedom Trail with 18th-century costumed Freedom Trail Players® or at your own pace. Step INSIDE the places where the American Revolution was launched, from pews and pulpits, private homes and public offices, with fiery speeches and midnight rides.

Boston is the territory of the Massachusetts and their neighbors the Wampanoag, and Nipmuc Peoples, who have stewarded this land for hundreds of generations. They dwelled on the Shawmut peninsula (what became the Town of Boston), fishing, hunting, growing food, trading, and thriving off the fresh springwater. Today, the City of Boston is home to thousands of Indigenous people.

Welcome to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts
William Francis Galvin, Secretary of the Commonwealth

We hope you leave plenty of time to explore our history – especially on foot – as you travel the Freedom Trail from the magnificent Massachusetts State House to the Bunker Hill Monument. There’s a proud story in every step.

Designed by the Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth and the Freedom Trail Foundation in partnership with the 16 official Freedom Trail historic sites. Funded in part by the Massachusetts Office of Travel & Tourism

On behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, Karyn and I send warm greetings as you embark on the historic Freedom Trail.

Massachusetts is rich with history and no other organization celebrates the Commonwealth’s past quite like the Freedom Trail and the Freedom Trail Foundation. Since its establishment in 1951, the Freedom Trail has helped to preserve 16 historically significant sites that attract millions and millions of people to the Bay State to retrace the steps of the brave men and women who shaped our nation.

These two and a half miles of red brick are a historical treasure – showcasing Boston’s pivotal role in establishing our independence.

We hope that you have fun learning about Massachusetts history and enjoy the Trail.

Charlie Baker, Governor of Massachusetts
Karyn Polito, Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts

On behalf of the City of Boston, I’m pleased to welcome you to the historic Freedom Trail. The iconic red bricks that wind their way through cobbled streets, sprawling parks, and grassy cemeteries tell the story of more than 250 years of Boston history. We’re home to the spaces and places where some of the most critical moments in our nation’s struggle for freedom were decided. And we’re proud of how those ideals live on today. We continue to be a city of revolutionary ideas and innovations, a city honored to welcome people from all over the world to our shores.

We’re known as the Cradle of Liberty for our role in the Revolutionary War, but also for our role in pioneering many public services. Along the Freedom Trail, you’ll find the nation’s oldest public park and first public school: testaments to the fact that liberty is born from community as well as conflict.

I hope your journey on the Freedom Trail, and through Boston’s—and our nation’s—history, brings you even closer to your community and ours.

Michelle Wu, Mayor of Boston
The Preservation Fund helps to support preservation, rehabilitation, and restoration for official Freedom Trail sites. These projects help avoid, minimize, or mitigate adverse effects of the elements and man-made wear and tear on Boston’s precious 17th-, 18th-, and 19th-century sites. Established in 2009, the Freedom Trail Foundation’s Preservation Fund issues grants which benefit Freedom Trail sites and whose expected outcomes fulfill its mission.
Massachusetts State House
Designed by Charles Bulfinch, the “new” State House was completed on January 11, 1798. Its golden dome was once made of wood, and later overlaid with copper by Paul Revere. It was covered with 23-karat gold leaf for the first time in 1874. The land for the State House was originally used as John Hancock’s cow pasture. Today, the State House is one of the oldest buildings on Beacon Hill, and its grounds cover 6.7 acres of land. It is under the golden dome that senators, state representatives, and the governor conduct the daily business of the Commonwealth.

Boston Common
America’s oldest public park, the Boston Common, began as a common grazing ground for sheep and cattle. Eccentric Anglican William Blackstone settled on Beacon Hill with only his books for company in 1622. In 1630, Puritans from Charlestown joined him to share the area's potable springs, but by 1635 Blackstone bristled at the increased population, sold his property to the townspeople of Boston, and moved to roomy Rhode Island to satisfy his reclusive nature. Each household was assessed six shillings for the purchase of the 44 acres of open land; it was held in common by the people and used as a pasture. The Common later became a “trayning” field for the militia and was utilized as a British Army camp during the occupation of Boston. The Common’s varied uses also included a place to hang pirates and witches and publicly pillory criminals. It has also served a higher purpose as a place for public oratory and discourse – Reverend Martin Luther King, Jr. spoke here, Pope John Paul II said Mass here, and Gloria Steinem advanced the feminist revolution on these grounds. Today, visitors to the Common may enjoy a concert, a performance of Shakespeare, or a simple, calm respite from the bustle of city life.

Some of America’s most notable citizens rest here. An elaborately embellished obelisk marks the site of John Hancock’s tomb. Benjamin Franklin’s parents, along with Revolutionary heroes such as Paul Revere, Samuel Adams, James Otis, all five of the Boston Massacre victims, and Peter Faneuil are also buried here. There is a discrepancy between the number of headstones and people buried in the Granary. Although there are only 2,345 markers, it is estimated that at least 5,000 people are buried here. Over 400 children have been buried in the Infant’s Tomb. Since headstones were expensive it was common to put several members of one family under one headstone with one name on it. There may be several possible explanations why groundkeepers arranged the stones in neat rows: to facilitate maintenance, shape the grounds more into a mold of the new “trendy” garden-style cemetery, or encourage people to stroll in the site instead of having sheep grazing on the “unorganized,” old-looking burying ground.

The 217-foot steeple of this church was once the first landmark travelers saw when approaching Boston. Its lofty architecture, designed by Peter Banner, reflects an even loftier mission of human rights and social justice. Prison reform began in this church, women’s suffrage was strongly supported here, and some of the first and most impassioned protests against slavery were delivered inside these hallowed walls. This church was founded in 1809. The site of Park Street Church is known as “Brimstone Corner,” perhaps because the church building once housed brimstone (a component of gun power) in its basement during the War of 1812. Or maybe it’s because old-school ministers delivered many “hell-fire and brimstone” sermons here. “America (My Country ‘Tis of Thee),” by Samuel Francis Smith, was first sung at Park Street Church on July 4, 1831. Many important organizations were founded here, including the Boston Branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Animal Rescue League of Boston, Handel and Haydn Society, and National Association of Evangelicals.

King’s Chapel & Burying Ground

Founded as New England’s first Anglican Church in 1686, King’s Chapel offers visitors more than 330 years of history through self-guided exploration, guided tours, talks, and special programs. From the earliest English arrivals, through the Revolution and the story of slavery in Boston, to the present day, King’s Chapel explores the roles of religion, tolerance, and justice in American history. The 1754 Stone Chapel, on the site of the original 1688 wooden chapel, is considered the finest example of Georgian Neoclassical architecture in North America. It contains original box pews, a 1717 wineglass pulpit, an 1816 Paul Revere bell that still rings today, a “Governor’s Pew” where George Washington sat, and one of the few colonial crypts in the United States. Its congregation experienced many events of the Revolutionary War first-hand. After the Revolution, King’s Chapel became, under the ministry of James Freeman, the country’s first Christian Unitarian Church, still active today.

King’s Chapel Burying Ground was the only burying place for nearly 30 years in Boston proper. John Winthrop, Massachusetts’ first governor, and Mary Chilton, the first woman to step off the Mayflower, are buried here. Joseph Tapping’s stone in the front of the burying ground (a skeleton and Father Time battling over the eventuality of death) may be Boston’s most beautiful headstone!

Boston Latin School Site / Benjamin Franklin Statue

America’s first public school offered instruction to boys – rich or poor – free of charge; girls were limited to what they were taught at home. The boys-only tradition finally ended in 1972 when girls were permitted to attend Boston Latin. It is fabled that on April 19, 1775, word of shots fired in Lexington circulated rapidly throughout Boston with, “Close your books. School’s done, and war’s begun!” A mosaic marks the spot where the school once stood, and where one of its most famous students, Benjamin Franklin, attended classes not long before he dropped out of school. Boston Latin School is still in operation in the Fenway neighborhood of Boston.

Constructed in 1718, the Old Corner Bookstore is downtown Boston's oldest commercial building. Over its 300-year existence, the building has been a residence, an apothecary, a cigar emporium, a tailor’s shop, and a pizza parlor. However, it is most renowned for its place in American literary history, as home to the 19th-century publishing giant Ticknor and Fields. From 1832 until 1865, Ticknor and Fields produced dozens of great American authors and their works, including Thoreau’s Walden, Hawthorne’s The Scarlet Letter, Harriet Beecher Stowe’s Uncle Tom’s Cabin, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow’s poetry, including the Midnight Ride of Paul Revere, and The Atlantic Monthly in which many notable works, such as Julie Ward Howe’s Battle Hymn of the Republic, were first released. Local leaders formed Historic Boston Inc. in 1960 to purchase and save the building from planned demolition. Today, the building continues as a place of commerce, and proceeds from its leases help Historic Boston restore similar buildings throughout Boston.

“The Body of the People” in Boston: Built in 1729 as a Puritan house of worship, the Old South Meeting House was the largest building in colonial Boston. Its size and central location made it the site of the most dramatic and stirring mass meetings leading to the American Revolution, from outraged protests following the Boston Massacre to the night of December 16, 1773, when 5,000 colonists, a third of the population of Boston, gathered here to protest British policies. When compromise failed, the Sons of Liberty marched down to Griffin’s Wharf to dump 342 chests of tea into Boston Harbor. As a church, Old South Meeting House was the spiritual home to Bostonians from all walks of life, from political leaders like Samuel Adams to artists like Phillis Wheatley, an enslaved poet who became the first African-American woman to publish a book of poetry. Today, it continues its legacy of the free exchange of ideas as one of the historical sites under the care of Revolutionary Spaces, presenting exhibits, tours, panels, and performances that connect people to our shared history.

Seat of Power in Colonial Boston: Built in 1713, the Old State House was where the royal Governor and his advisers served as direct representatives of the King's rule. In the years leading to the Revolution, the building was the center for passionate debate, as Boston patriots including Samuel Adams, John Hancock, and James Otis, Jr. fomented the spirit of rebellion and asked the essential questions of self-government that we still grapple with today. In 1770, directly outside the Old State House, soldiers opened fire on a crowd of unarmed protesters in the incident known as the Boston Massacre, and when the people of Boston first heard the Declaration of Independence in July of 1776, it was read from the Old State House balcony. After the Revolution, the ideals of that document were tested here as women, indigenous people, African-Americans, and propertyless citizens petitioned for their rights in the face of disenfranchisement. Today the Old State House is one of the sites under the care of Revolutionary Spaces, and presents exhibits, tours, panels, and performances that invite all people to join in the fundamental debates at the heart of American life.

Boston Massacre Site
On March 5, 1770, at this site, a deadly skirmish erupted between nine British “redcoats” and a large crowd of Boston residents. Angry over the town’s occupation by British forces, local toughs threw snowballs, rocks, and hard words at a lone sentry outside the nearby Custom House. The sentry was reinforced, the crowd became a mob, and the soldiers opened fire, fatally wounding five Bostonians. What British officials called the “Unhappy Disturbance at Boston,” Paul Revere labeled a “bloody massacre.” His widely circulated illustration of the event was a model of propaganda and did much to stir up anti-British sentiment in the colonies. The British soldiers were tried for murder and were defended by John Adams, a young Boston lawyer who was as loyal to the idea of justice as he was to the Patriot cause.

Built around 1680, the Paul Revere House is the oldest remaining structure in downtown Boston and is the only official Freedom Trail historic site that is a home. Paul Revere purchased this former merchant’s dwelling in 1770, when he was 35 years old. He and his family lived here when Revere made his famous messenger ride on the night of April 18 – 19, 1775. For most of the 19th-century, the home served as a rooming house and tenement for some of the thousands of Irish, Jewish, and Italian immigrants who lived in the North End. Restored in the early 20th-century and opened to the public in April 1908, the Paul Revere House today serves as a museum and historic site where visitors can learn about Paul Revere’s life and times, and experience what home life was like in 17th- and 18th-century Boston.

Faneuil Hall
Often referred to as “the home of free speech” and “the Cradle of Liberty,” Faneuil Hall was one of America’s first public meeting venues. Built by wealthy merchant Peter Faneuil in 1741, this imposing structure is the place where the citizens of Boston proclaimed their dissent against Royal oppression. Faneuil Hall has served as an open forum meeting hall and marketplace for more than 270 years and has continued to provide a platform for debate on the most consequential issues of the day. The first floor served as a marketplace for the local townspeople to sell their goods. Today, Boston National Historical Park operates the Faneuil Hall Visitor Center and the City of Boston holds naturalization ceremonies in the Great Hall on the second floor. Explore the Great Hall where Bostonians protested the taxation policies of the British Empire and set the doctrine of “no taxation without representation” through talks and living history programs where visitors join in the debate.

Old North Church

“One if by land, and two if by sea”! With two lights shining from its steeple on April 18, 1775, Old North Church lit the way for the American Revolution. This signal, arranged by Paul Revere, launched a network of riders, including Revere, on a mission to warn people the British troops had begun their march to Concord and Lexington. These events were later immortalized in Henry Wadsworth Longfellow’s poem, “Paul Revere’s Ride,” and have become an enduring example of active citizenship. Explore Old North’s unique box pews, 17th-century angels and their connection to privateering, and stories of the early congregants and free and enslaved Black parishioners. Tour the 1723 church – the oldest in Boston – and its crypt, a powerful war memorial, the gift shop in the former St. Francis Chapel, as well as the historic Clough House – Boston’s second oldest brick building. The Printing Office of Edes & Gill, housed in the Clough House, offers live demonstrations of colonial printing alongside a shop dedicated to artisanal New England-made products.

Copp’s Hill Burying Ground

Copp’s Hill Burying Ground is the final resting place of merchants, artisans, and craftspeople who lived in the North End. Some notables buried in Copp’s Hill are fire and brimstone preachers Cotton and Increase Mather, Old North Church sexton Robert Newman – the man who hung the lanterns on the night of Paul Revere’s ride, and countless free African-Americans buried in a potter’s field on the Charter Street side of the site. Because of its height and panoramic vistas, the British used this vantage point to train their cannons on Charlestown during the Battle of Bunker Hill. The epitaph on Captain Daniel Malcolm’s tombstone at Copp’s Hill is riddled with the marks of vengeful British bullets.

Launched in Boston in 1797, America’s Ship of State earned her nickname “Old Ironsides” during the War of 1812 when she fought the British frigate HMS Guerriere. During the historic battle, cannonballs fired at her appeared to bounce off, causing a Constitution sailor to exclaim ‘Huzzah! It’s as if her sides are made of iron!’ to which Captain Isaac Hull responded, ‘Ironsides, aye.’ In fact, the hull of Constitution is constructed of a three-layer wooden sandwich comprised of live oak and white oak. Today, 222 years later, she is still a commissioned United States Navy warship with a crew of naval officers and enlisted personnel, and is open to the public for onboard visits.

“Don’t fire until you see the whites of their eyes!” This legendary order, believed to have been uttered at the battle, has come to immortalize the determination of the ill-equipped Colonists facing the powerful British Army during the famous battle fought on this site on June 17, 1775. The Battle of Bunker Hill marks one of the first times Colonial forces held their own against the British army. Today a 221-foot granite obelisk denotes the site of the first major battle of the American Revolution. Located across the street, the Bunker Hill Museum’s exhibits and dioramas tell the stories of the battle and the monument.

Steps Off the Trail

Boston Tea Party Ships & Museum
The Boston Tea Party, “the single most important event leading up to the American Revolution,” occurred the night of December 16, 1773. Step inside the Boston Tea Party Ships & Museum for an incredible journey back in time, where you become part of that fateful night. Actors in period clothing, high-tech interactive exhibits, authentically restored 18th-century cargo ships and a stirring multi-sensory film are just a taste of what you will see, feel and hear on our floating museum overlooking Boston Harbor.
$31.95 adults; $23.95 children 5-12; free-children under 4

Museum of African American History
Walk in the footsteps of Frederick Douglass, William Lloyd Garrison, Maria Stewart, and all the black and white abolitionist giants who rallied for freedom and equality across the nation from the Colonial period through the 19th-century. Experience the beautifully restored African Meeting House, built by free black craftsmen in 1806 and the oldest black church still standing in the United States. Explore the Abiel Smith School, the oldest public school building for African-American students, now featuring galleries of rotating exhibits, a museum gift store, and hourly tours led by interpretive rangers of the National Park Service, Boston African-American National Historic Site. The Museum welcomes visitors from around the world to the nation’s most important African-American National Historic Landmarks to hear incredible stories of organized free black communities, and experience Park Ranger-led Black Heritage Trail® tours.

The "ORIGINAL" on Beacon Hill

This little neighborhood bar was discovered by Producers from Hollywood in 1981 to be the inspiration for the setting of their new TV sitcom named Cheers.

One of the most popular sitcoms of all time. This original bar still offers the fun hospitality that the Producers liked.

Freedom Trail Website & Store
In celebration of the Freedom Trail’s anniversary on June 11, the Freedom Foundation has launched a new website and store. This online platform welcomes people to the City of Boston, Freedom Trail, 16 official Freedom Trail historic sites, and beyond. The modern, responsive, branded-destination website offers an easy to use experience and tool for users at home and on the Freedom Trail. The Freedom Trail store offers one of a kind souvenirs, books such as the Freedom Trail Guide and A Kid’s Guide to the Freedom Trail, in addition to other student-friendly and grownup-intriguing books and items. Visit TheFreedomTrail.org or call 617-357-8300.

Preserving the Freedom Trail
The Freedom Trail Foundation’s Preservation Fund was established in 2009 to help support preservation, rehabilitation, restoration and capital projects for the 16 official Freedom Trail historic sites. Since its inception, the Preservation Fund has awarded $525,000 to assist official Freedom Trail historic sites with their extensive independent fundraising efforts for necessary restoration and maintenance projects to help preserve Boston’s treasures. King’s Chapel Burying Ground’s landscaping improvements restoration, Old South Meeting House’s energy efficiency climate control system, Old State House’s south façade and energy efficiency, and Paul Revere House’s masonry and exterior façade and electrical upgrade projects were recently completed. More restoration and preservation projects are underway!

Hear History: Audio Guide of the Freedom Trail!
Walk on your own and listen to the stories of the Revolution with the Freedom Trail Foundation’s MP3 player audio guide. The 3-hour self-guided tour presents the 16 official Freedom Trail sites, with ambient sounds and music of the times. Download or purchase it to brush up on American Revolutionary history and beyond, for your visit to the Freedom Trail, or as a souvenir! Available online at TheFreedomTrail.org.
